

APPENDIX 2

Rats through the ages.

Some famous Rats who have made their mark, (so to speak), on the annals, (or anals?), of history, but whose deeds might have escaped the notice of lesser mortals.

Ratula - Not a bat - History got that wrong, (except for the upside-down hanging thing)

The Hooded Rat - (also known as the RatsHead) - famed for his skill with the longbow, and great legs.

Ratman and Robin - (no he wasn't a bat either). Spectacularly cool behind the wheel of the RatMobile.

SuperRat - Again - no bats, although does a bit of flying.

Geronirat - Arguably the swiftest thing on four legs.

RoboRat - An unqualified success in the underworld, given the availability of 3-in-1.

Ratty Potter - A relative newcomer.

The Rat the Witch And the Wardrobe - Cats - who needs 'em!

Rat on a Hot Tin Roof - A tale of The Deep Sewer.

The Taming of the Rat - A classical favourite with the male of the species.

Rattus Andronicus - Who had a big nose and more relatives than was good for him.

Poirat - Famous for his use of the Little Brown Smells.

Ratspewtin - Famous for the obvious.

John Paul Satrat - A philosopher and thinker; his immortal words 'I eat therefore I am' have a special place in the ratty heart to this day. (Please note there is some dispute over the origin of this phrase as Samantha maintains it was first coined by some guy called Des.)

Rateki - Head of the Jungle Jesus squad, well know for risky tree acroratics and dodgy lyrics

The Rat Brigade – who charged into history, very briefly, into the teeth of a troop of Persian Blues and who met a fate worse than a Stephen King's- Death, in general, being a lot more compassionate
Ratpunzle – known locally as a window cleaner's delight and Rateo's let down
Kevin Kilcat - How did he get in?
